fellow workers in bars as well as on breaks. Kerry is talking to a gentleman in a trench coat. (1966). This is approximately half the student population crowded into [black] P.S. 79, where 1,550 children fill a space intended for 1,000, and a great deal smaller than the 1,300 children packed into the former skating rink.⁷⁵ This right of use and enjoyment is also reflected in the structure of the curriculum, also described by Kozol: The curriculum [the white school] follows "emphasizes critical thinking, reasoning and logic." The planetarium, for instance, is employed not simply for the study of the universe as it exists. So does the confidence in education as a way of keeping the culture alive, or of initiating newcomers into learning communities, or of providing the means for pursuing a satisfying life. As a consequence it is easy to ignore that almost everything he has written also deals with the role of revolutionary leadership—the way in which socialist revolutionary leaders must work and learn with the people as well as their organizational role. Those are most people in this country. Learning about one's students is not simply a technical strategy, or a process of picking up a few cultural tidbits. Representations of disability on film. Our self-image is thus dominated by the non-disabled world's reaction to us. That is, when disability is considered through a cultural lens, ability is interrogated in much the same way that gender is interrogated by feminist studies scholars and Whiteness is interrogated by ethnic studies scholars.
